The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. He has a black eye and a bandage on his left arm. He tells his tale of adventures, making Aunt Polly feel proud of him and disposed to forgive him. Tom tells her how he was whipped at school that afternoon and how he was saved by the whistle of a trolley car that was coming down the street. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom goes out of the house in search of a smoke. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, he meets Injun Joe, a cunning and sly Indian. Tom and the new arrival enter the house of the woodcutter and eventually chase the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of muzzle. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chase him off, leaving Tom alone with his thoughts.
