The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically. "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's mischievous and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. His clothes are torn and dirty, and he has a story of adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly asks him why he was not sent to the window, but at the same time, she is pleased with his return and feels that she has done what was necessary.

The next morning, Tom goes out of the house to play. He soon finds a boy who has skipped school that afternoon and wants to go to the river. Tom agrees, and the two boys set off. They reach the river and decide to go for a swim. After swimming, they see a boat and decide to go on a ride. They get into the boat and row towards the middle of the river. The boat capsizes, and Tom swims to the shore to escape. He returns home late that night.

The next day, Tom and Aunt Polly are at the town meeting. Aunt Polly is sitting with a friend, and Tom is playing with a group of boys. Aunt Polly is concerned about Tom's behavior and asks him to behave himself. Tom promises to behave, but he soon gets bored and starts playing with a group of boys. Aunt Polly is frustrated and calls for Tom to come home.

When Tom returns home, Aunt Polly is angry. She asks him why he was not at school and what he has been doing. Tom tells her that he has been at the river and that he was playing with a group of boys. Aunt Polly is displeased and decides to punish Tom by making him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom refuses, and Aunt Polly agrees to let him do the work. Tom then decides to whitewash the fence for a "white alley," a kind of unluck. Aunt Polly agrees, but Tom starts using the fence as a ladder. Aunt Polly is pleased and rewards Tom with a glass of lemonade.

Tom comes home at supper time. He tells his mother how he was tricked by a group of boys into skipping school that afternoon and went rowing in a boat. He has been shipwrecked and run ashore that night, but fortunately Tom’s half-brother, Ben Brown, has saved him and he is now safe. Tom has sworn never to drink again and has resolved to behave better.

Tom goes out of the house in vain for Ben Brown. He is not at home, but Tom finds a bottle of whisky and sniffs it whiskily. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets a group of rowdy boys and joins in their gambling and eventually kisses the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolve to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. A man passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of mustard. The man almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chased him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.
