The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects ruefully on Tom’s naughtiness and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. His clothes are dirty, and he has a bandage on his head and shows his thumb that his collar is still on from the day before. When Aunt Polly asks him what he has been doing, Tom says that he has been skipping school that afternoon and went down to the river and was caught by a bull and drowned, but Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom and the new arrival are not exactly on the best of terms. Tom has already given him the quiet corner to the right of the stove to sit in and occasionally he makes a speech about Tom’s behavior.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. He is passing by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing as return for a “white alley,” a kind of mask. He almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his toil.
