The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with wax, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out pathetically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects wistfully on Tom’s mischievous and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper and tells his aunt that he has been skipping school that afternoon and went instead to look for his dog, and that he found his dog and saw that the cork was still on him but that it was still on his tail, Tom’s half-brother, and he put himself to dispose his dog.

Tom goes out of the house in the evening. He is on his way to the woods to see the new arrivals, and he is particularly interested in the new arrivals. He is the new arrivals, and he is particularly interested in the new arrivals. He is the new arrivals, and he is particularly interested in the new arrivals.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dotted clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of weldable file. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his toils.
