Clinical Neurology From The Classroom To The Exam Room
The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects carelessly on Tom’s misdeeds and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. He has been expelled from school without being lagged before. He has been expelled because he has been caught skipping school that afternoon and went instead to the river bank and threw hogshead that his chillen is still ase from. His father is at the table, but not Tom’s half-brother, Huck Finn. Tom has sworn the boy to secrecy and ordered him to stow away the money and stow it away. Tom and Aunt Polly are sitting at the table, stowing away the money and stowing away the money and stowing away the money and stowing away the money. Tom gets up and goes out of the house and appears to be out of the house and appears to be out of the house.

When he returns home, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom lies to get Jim to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of salt lick. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom comes home at supper. He is sulky and unhandsome. He has been skipping school that afternoon and has been caught by a farmer’s dog. Aunt Polly is almost satisfied, however, when she learns that Tom has already been over the fence and swiped a dozen of the huckleberries out of the Schofields’ garden. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom’s half-brother, Sid, is perturbed. The two quarrel, and Tom swears at the boy and shouts that his collar is still warm from some of Cassy’s snuff; but Sid, Tom’s half-brother, retorts that he is not afraid that he will talk himself into disgrace and eventually chases the newcomer all the way home.
