The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered in jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects ruefully on Tom’s mischievous and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper, a dirty and ragged-looking lad. He shows Aunt Polly a small bag filled with a few half-minted Irish pennies. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom’s father does not believe in skipping school that morning and warns Tom not to go out. Tom’s half-brother, Sid, is still away from home, but Tom’s half-brother, Sid, is not here. Tom’s father is in the house, but Tom, Tom, and Tom, Tom’s father, are not here. Tom, Tom, and Tom, Tom’s father, are not here.

Tom goes out of the house to look for his aunt. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets a mysterious man who is his cousin, Huck Finn. They become friends and eventually chase the newsboys all the way home.

When he arrives home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of services. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his toiletries.
