The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects matter-of-factly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. Aunt Polly is pleased to see him. She tells him that he has been skipped school that afternoon and must now go to school the next day. Tom groans, but Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has served the shot himself to disguise his Tom goes out of the house in the evening, to wander the streets of St. Petersburg, deserted and vacant. Tom and the new arrival exult in the abandonment and eventually choose the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of whistle. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how the boys have got away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and tells his aunt how he has been playing hooky at school that afternoon. He was absent because he was skipped school that afternoon and went instead to the woods. His aunt is shocked and shows him that his clothes are still wet from the rain, but she is pleased that Tom has shown himself to be adventuresome.

Tom goes out of the house in the evening to look for his friend Huckleberry Finn. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom is seen by a group of boys, who challenge him to a box match. Tom accepts and eventually choses the newcomer as the way home.
