The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s misbehavior and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime, and his mother solemnly delivers the news that he has been skipped school that afternoon and spent the rest of the day in the woods badgering a beaver and chased by a wolf. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom goes out of the house immediately and begins his solitary walk down the street to clear his head and sober his mind. Birdsong and the voices of Sunday school children are in the air. Tom is in despair, but he quickly pushes these thoughts aside.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of muzzle. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom comes home at supper time to find his aunt so cross that she has put on her solemn black dress. Aunt Polly tells Tom how she heard Mr. Draper was going to make him drop out of school that afternoon and how she was so cross she went to bed and threw her old black apron over her head. Tom is punished and eventually cherishes the memory of the whole house.
