The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects carefully on Tom’s misbehavior and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime to a storm of blanket confessions. He tells about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly inquires if he has been skipped school that afternoon and wants to know how the beard and shows her that his collar is still worn from the kiss the night before. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but still, Tom’s half-brother, Huck, must keep Tom out of trouble. Tom has sworn the orphan that he doesn’t want to stay in St. Petersburg.

Tom goes out of the house into the bath and sees the whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, he sees a man with a beard and a mustache. Tom and the new arrival each claim to be from Philadelphia. Tom’s self-confidence and eventually choosers the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him wash the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiten the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of mocking. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and choses him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
