The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his bands are covered with mud, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects narrowly on Tom's misbehavior and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper, dressed in dirty clothes and stories about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly reports Tom had been skipped school that afternoon and went somewhere that his clothes are still scrunched up, but not. Tom’s half-brother, Joe, arrives late, and Joe is a born liar who asks Tom to explain his adventures.

Tom goes out of the house in a rage and climbs on a high fence. He sees Mr. Hale, a wealthy and respected man, out for a stroll. Tom frowns, and Hale is not interested in Tom. Tom then jumps off the fence and chases the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Joe passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "thee alley," a kind of nightclub. Joe almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time, and Aunt Polly is satisfied. She asks how his day went. Tom claims he was skipped school that afternoon and went swimming instead. Aunt Polly was not pleased, but after hearing his story, she relents and pardons him. Tom and his new friend, Becky Thatcher, decide to investigate the case of the stolen tinfoil, and eventually chase the newsmen all the way home.
