The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper, looking as glum as a wet cat. He has been expelled from school for skipping school that afternoon and swatting a wasp. But still, Tom’s half-brother, Joe, is waited on hand and foot. Joe’s father is still away from home, but Tom’s is back. Tom has sworn the shut himself to disgrace his father once again.

Tom goes out of the house in the night and is walking in the streets of St. Petersburg. He sees a hired man管理工作 and eventually chooses the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of mask. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at suppertime. After dinner, Aunt Polly asks him about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly tells Tom that if he ever gets into such a scrape again, he will be shipped back to school that afternoon and sent out to the scrape farm. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom’s half-brother, Sid, tells Tom that his crick is still sore from a blow his sister gave him. Aunt Polly enters the room and teases Tom. Tom has sworn to Aunt Polly to desist from more pranks. Tom goes out of the house and is thinking about the scrape farm, hating it, but fearing Aunt Polly.
