The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes out the front. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects ruefully on Tom’s mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom goes out of the house immediately to roam the streets of St. Petersburg. His coat is still new from his brother Sid, but Sid’s half-brother, Joe Harper, who has worn it himself to disguise his own misbehavior, is none the worse for wear. While wandering down the streets, Tom sees a black-faced uncleander and acquaintance. Tom and the new arrival chat amiably, and eventually chases the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, andTom lies to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of mistake. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and rushes him off, leaving Tom alone with his troubles.
