The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects rashly on Tom’s naughtiness and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom goes out of the house into the street. His coat is still warm from the stove and shows him that his collar is still away from Aunt Polly. Tom has always been the kind of boy who never minded being whipped and always tried to get away with his own way.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his disheveled clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “blue alley,” a kind of ushers, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his toil.

Tom comes home at supper-time. The boy is not well about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly says, “You’ve been skipped school that afternoon and went everywhere. I suppose your bare head and dirty hands that your collar is still away from, but sit down, Tom’s half brother, and eat up your dinner.” Tom rolls up his sleeves to dispense his bad humor.

Tom goes out of the house to play, but hears a whistle. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom and the new arrival encounter the local gang. At first, Tom is quite afraid and eventually chooses the easiest way home.
