Tom comes home at suppertime, his mother having been informed of his doings by a country school that afternoon and wants to know what has become of him. Tom lies that he has been skipped school that afternoon and went fishing in a boat. He tells her that his collar is still away from home, but that he has sold it to a fiend. Tom’s half-brother, Sid, tries to dissuade his mother from worrying, but has been chasing the newswoman all the way home.
