The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically. "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime. His mother has just received word of Tom's escapade. She tells him that he will have to be skipped school that afternoon and won't even have his dinner because his clothes are still wet from the rain. Tom is brokenhearted but finds comfort in his aunt's forgiveness. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom and the new arrival go for a walk in the country. Tom and the new arrival chat amiably and eventually choose the cornice all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alley," a kind of notice. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at supper. He has been playing hooky from school. He has run away from school and has spent the day out of harm's way, sauntering the streets with his friends. His Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom's half-brother, Sid, is not. Tom offers to help him bounce his sister's doll and swears that he will never be skipped school that afternoon and will rejoin his companions in the street.

Tom goes out of the house in the afternoon and is run down by a carriage. He is taken to the hospital and eventually comes the way home.
