The novel opens with Aunt Polly scowling the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects wistfully on Tom's inexperience and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper. He looks very uneasy and she asks about his adventures. During supper, Aunt I says, "You'll have to be whipped tomorrow for that.

Aunt Polly is satisfied, for she knows that Tom can't be whisked that afternoon and expects to see him over the fence before morning. Aunt Polly is still aware that Tom's collar is still worn down, but she is not so worried that he will be caught.

Tom and the new arrival eat cake and ice cream without payment and eventually chase the nurse off the way house.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alley," a kind of salute. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
