The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a spanking. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s escapades and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime. His face is dirty and he has a black eye. He has been skipping school that afternoon and went over to the houses of some boys who do not go to school in order to get a start in the whittling. While whittling the streets of St. Petersburg, he had met a new arrival in town, a man who has been shipwrecked and rescued. Tom and the new arrival circled around the man, curious and eventually chased the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. The fence is long and simple, and Aunt Polly promises that if Tom can finish the whitewashing before noon, she will give him a treat. Tom quickly agrees and sets to work, determined to whitewash the fence before noon.

As Tom works, the sun shines brightly and the weather is warm. Tom is soon covered in sweat and dirt, but he continues to work diligently, determined to finish the fence before noon. Aunt Polly watches from the porch, a smile on her face.

When Tom finally finishes the whitewashing, Aunt Polly is pleased and gives him his treat. Tom is happy and proud of his accomplishment, feeling a sense of satisfaction and accomplishment.

The end.
The novel opens with Aunt Polly scowling the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with ink, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects worriedly on Tom’s mischief and how she let him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and tells his aunt the heady details. He has been picked out of the school that afternoon and went over the fence. He has sold a droll joke about the river and shows her that his cotton is still white from the pickings. But that, Tom’s half-brother, isn’t Tom’s name and he shuns himself to disguise his identity.

Tom goes out of the house into the night air, and the next thing he knows is that he is sent by the headmaster and the aunt to Whitworth. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets Huckleberry Finn and they become fast friends. The aunt is satisfied, and Tom has earned the respect of his schoolmates.
