The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly sits matter-of-factly on Tom’s schoolbook and hews the lads him got away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and finds the house full of people—everybody seems to have known about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly reveals that Tom has been skipped school that afternoon and went roundabout to a place the boys call “the hill” in search of something he was looking for. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but still, Tom’s half-brother, Sid, teases Tom about the whole affair.

Tom goes out of the house in search of his pals. He gets to the wharf and sees his pals playing whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom sees a sign for “The Widow Douglas” and eventually交叉一整个街坊的路

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterash the fence. His pals try, and Tom tries to get them to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of scramble. His offer goes over, but Aunt Polly appears and chases them off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
