The novel opens with Aunt Polly scowling the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s naughtiness and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper and while Dolly is telling them all how much he has learned about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly is half-disgusted and half-excited. Tom and his new arrival companion, Huckleberry Finn, have just skipped school that afternoon and went river-rafting. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, they meet a man who looks like Tom’s father, and Tom knows he is a relative because he has the same red hair and beard and knows he that his father is still men between there and New York. Tom has sworn the boy to keep his mouth shut about this.

Tom goes out of the house in search of his father. He is not there, but he finds Tom’s half-brother, Sid, in the yard. Tom begins to think of a new way to make his father know he exists, and eventually clueless the newspaper all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of marble. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
