The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s misdeeds and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time and is shocked to learn that he has missed school that afternoon and must be skipped school that afternoon and must make up his work. Aunt Polly is satisfied. The head of school and shows him that his birth is still seven years away.

Tom goes out of the house in the evening to whiten the fence. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, he meets a young man and is taken to a dance and eventually chooses the wrong girl of the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white ally,” a kind of muzzle. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Fecal incontinence (FI), also known as anal incontinence, or in some forms encopresis, is a lack of control over defecation, leading to involuntary loss of bowel contents—including flatus (gas), liquid stool elements and mucus, or solid feces.

Fecal incontinence refers to the involuntary loss of gas or liquid stool (called minor incontinence) or the involuntary loss of solid stool (called major incontinence). Surveys indicate that it affects between 2 and 7 percent of the general population, although the true incidence may be much higher.

Aetna considers injection of autologous myoblast cells or mesenchymal stem cells for the treatment of fecal incontinence experimental and investigational because its effectiveness for this indication has not been established.

Overview. Fecal incontinence is the inability to control bowel movements, causing stool (feces) to leak unexpectedly from the rectum. Also called bowel incontinence, fecal incontinence ranges from an occasional leakage of stool while passing gas to a complete loss of bowel control.

Medical tests. A number of tests are available to help pinpoint the cause of fecal incontinence:

- Digital rectal exam. Your doctor inserts a gloved and lubricated finger into your rectum to evaluate the strength of your sphincter muscles and to check for any abnormalities in the rectal area.
