Medicine And Victory British Military Medicine In The Second World War
The novel opens with Aunt Polly scowling the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's mischief and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper and tells Aunt Polly about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly finds that Tom has skipped school that afternoon and goes on to reprimand him. Tom's Uncle, the poet, is in town and catches Tom off guard with a poem. Aunt Polly is satisfied, and Tom has sworn under the poet's influence to behave better.

Tom goes out of the house into the streets of St. Petersburg. He is considering what to do next. Tom and the other boys are in a bit of a pickle with their chores, and Tom decides to take things in hand. At the cemetery, he finds a learned man who is engaged in some kind of experiment and eventually appears the new owner of the whole house.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alloy," a kind of marble, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.
