The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's mischievous and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper. He is dressed in rags. He has a black eye and blood has run about his forehead. During supper, Aunt Polly asks Tom about his adventures. She has heard that he has been skipping school that afternoon and was even seen near the mill. Tom is asked to go to bed and stay there. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom and his new arrival of clothes fit him well. He is a well-dressed and acceptable. Tom goes out of the house while his aunt's taken in the kitchen. He is pleased.

When he returns home in the evening, Aunt Polly finds him waiting for her. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Sam passes by, and Tom tries to get Sam to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alley," a kind of edibility. Sam almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
