The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her niece, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and preparers to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically. “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischief and how she let him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper. He is all dressed up and in high spirits. He has been skipping school that afternoon and went swimming. His clothes are soaked and torn, but Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has removed the shirt himself to disguise his face.

Tom takes out of the house his new arrival in the form of a pet duck. Tom and the new arrival are in a whirlwind of activity and eventual chases the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterwash the fence. Bob passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing as return for a “white alley,” a kind of sable. Bob almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

Tom comes home at suppertime and tells his mother all about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly asks about Tom’s return, and Tom tells her about the jam he has been eating. He shares that he has been skipping school that afternoon and even went to a friend’s house, but sat, Tom’s half-brother, just sat there in a corner thinking. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom and the new arrival eat supper, and eventually, the new comer is announced as a new relative from the other side of the family. Tom goes out of the house to look at the new comer, and Aunt Polly calls to him, but Tom only says, “whistling, whistling.”
