The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mischievous habit and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time and tells his mother about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Icky tells Tom that he will never be skipped school that afternoon and must go to school. Tom’s mother is still angry that his collar is still worn from the previous day, but she lets Tom’s half-brother, Joe, alone to play. Joe dreams of getting Tom to join him in his adventures and eventually chases the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. Joe passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind ofuable. Joe almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at suppertime and his mother is surprised to see him back so soon. She asks him what he’s been doing, but Tom won’t say. Aunt Polly is satisfied. During supper, Aunt Polly asks Tom if he has any regrets for the day. Tom says he has none, except that he could have skipped school that afternoon and spent the rest of the day playing. Aunt Polly is relieved.

Tom and the new arrival of the new boy, Mark, soon become friends. Tom easily befriends the new boy, and eventually the new boy comes to the way house.
