The novel opens with Aunt Polly scowling, the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the brace. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects ruefully on Tom’s naughtiness and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper. The boy’s face is all smudged blue and black about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly says Tom must be skipped school that afternoon and next morning. Tom’s face is a mask of silent horror, but later, Tom’s half-brother, Joe, is shown to be, too.

Tom goes out of the house. He strolls around the town for a while, whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets Huckleberry Finn, a wandering and arrogant boy and eventually becomes the new owner of the whole town.

Tom goes home when he gets home. Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his soiled clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Joe passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “tobacco alley,” a kind of snuffbox. Joe almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
