The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s escapades and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and his mother asks him if he had an eventful day at school. Tom tells her about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly says that Tom should be allowed to skip school that afternoon and go with Tom in his boat. Tom is pleased and goes to the headboard and shows her that his collar is still warn from the baiting he had yesterday. Then Tom’s half-brother, Benji, comes and Tom shouts himself to dismiss him.

Tom goes out of the house into the street. The street is surrounded and crowded, and Tom is pleased. Tom and the new arrival cool off in the first fountain they come to and eventually chase the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and says to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of mustard he almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chase him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.
