The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered in jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out dramatically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes out the window. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s mishap and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper and his aunt asks him how school was that afternoon and what news he has about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly mentions that she’s going to be skipped school that afternoon and Tom is overjoyed at the news that his uncle is still away from town. At the end of dinner, Aunt Polly is satisfied, but Tom’s half brother, Sid, wants to use Tom to the jailhouse to disguise his own escape. Tom agrees but decides to join her.

Tom goes out of the house to the jailhouse, which is on a hill and shows him that his uncle is still away from town. Tom and the new arrival edit their plans, and eventually choose to return all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly asks Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom asks to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of marmalade. Aunt Polly agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases Tom off, leaving Tom alone with his takings.

Tom comes home at supper with a red face and a medley of dirt on his shirt and shoes that his mother is still trying to wash. Tom is still wearing his tarred slippers, but Aunt Polly is satisfied. She asks Tom to wash his hands and go to bed and shows him that his coffee is still warm from the stove. Aunt Polly is pleased that Tom has learned to obey his aunt. Tom, however, is not pleased with the thought of having to eat his dinner without butter and missing his bedtime story. Aunt Polly is relieved that Tom has learned to obey his aunt.

Tom goes out of the house in the evening and sees some boys playing baseball. He watches them for a while and eventually decides to join in the fun. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets Huckleberry Finn, who offers to take him on a grand adventure.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Sam Pateley, Tom's best friend, offers to help him if he gives him a dollar. Tom refuses, and Tom tries to get Sam to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alabaster," a kind of marble. Sam almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
Most new climbers are introduced to the sport in gyms featuring roped climbing, many old-school climbers will continue clipping bolts forever...and then there's everyone else in between. What is sport climbing?

Sport climbing is, essentially, competitive climbing. Dating back to the 1940s in the former USSR, the sport really started gaining ground in the 1980s before the first World Championship in 1991. Sport climbing covers a number of forms, and below you can read about the three disciplines that have been chosen for the Tokyo Games in 2020.
