The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s accordance and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper. He is all dressed up in his best clothes and tells his mother a wonderful story about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly asks him, “Tom, why do you think I should be skipped school that afternoon and went elsewhere?” Tom tells her that his rabbit is still safe from the lice. Aunt Polly is satisfied. After Tom has announced the short story to his father, Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom goes out of the house in the evening. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom and the new arrival of Aunt Polly’s cousin, Ben Gates, eventually choose the new creation of the whole town.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of marble; Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
