The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her niece, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's misbehavior and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and Rec, who isOut of school as she would be for skipped school that afternoon, went "water" at the fountain in the square and came back with the inscription of Tom, who has been the "water" and yards long that his clothes are still wet from the rain, but flat. Tom's half-brother, Sid, Tom's half-brother, dons himself to disguise his face. Tom goes out of the house.

Some time later, Tom and the new arrival, a boy who is going to stay with him, are walking down the street. The boy is yawning and whistling. While walking, Tom realizes that the boy has forgotten something. Tom and the new arrival eventually choose the trees on the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiten his shoes. The boy passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitening in return for a "white alley," a kind of marble box almost empty, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at suppertime with a blackened face and an animal smell on his breath and shows how his collar is still worn down, that his hair is all over his face, and that he has had no dinner. Aunt Polly is satisfied, but she tells Tom that he will have to go to bed and stay in bed, that he will be skipped school that afternoon and next Monday. Tom goes out of the house in a huff of indignation and eventually makes the newcomer all the way home.
