The novel opens with Aunt Polly scowling the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's misbehavior and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime and says he had planned to skip school that afternoon and visit a friend who lived on the other side of town. Aunt Polly, however, finds his clothes black and soiled and teems that his collar is still seen from the other side of the street by aunt Polly.

Tom goes out of the house to get his clothes, but finds that the house is empty. He goes to the window and sees Aunt Polly outside. Tom is the new arrival, and the house is empty. Tom comes back and sat in the window to dispose his bunt.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiten the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "swine alley," a kind of marble. Tom almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his labor.

Tom comes home at suppertime, newraid and showing a great deal of excitement about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly asks him if he has been to school that afternoon, and Tom tells her that he has been skipped school that afternoon and went instead to the woods. Tom says his hands are still sore from the whip, but that Tom’s half brother, Ben, who is still in school, has been whipped worse and has more scars. Tom has sworn the boy to secrecy, and Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom goes out of the house into the darkening street. He is whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom sees an old man, most likely a Hernando and arrogant. Tom and the new arrival exchange a few words and eventually chase the newcomer all the way home.
