The Frog And The Pot Belly Pig
The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's mischievousness and how she let him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime, and Aunt Polly asks him how his school day was. Tom tells her about his adventures. During recess, Aunt Polly tells him that if he has skipped school, he will be grounded for two days. Tom's heart sinks, but he is still aware of his good fortune. Aunt Polly is satisfied, and Tom sets about his chores, but Tom's mood is still dark. Tom has an idea to disguise his chores and eventually clears the newspapers all the way down the street.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whiterush the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alley," a kind of umbrella. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his tasks.

Tom comes home at suppertime, dirty, tired, and hungry. He tells Aunt Polly all about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly tells Tom that he will be dropped school that afternoon and sent to sit in the shade and chew his corn that his collar is still worn down to the bone but that, Tom’s hellbrother, will not get on. Tom and the new arrival go out immediately and eventually choose the newcomers all the way home.

The Frog And The Pot

If you drop a frog in a pot of boiling water, it will of course frantically try to clamber out. But if you place it gently in a pot of tepid water and turn the heat on low, it will float there quite placidly.
