The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, "Look behind you!" and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom's prankishness and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time on Sunday evening. He has learned that his school will be skipped school that afternoon and evening again and that his collar is still awry from the beginning of term. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has secured the shirt himself to disguise his misadventure. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom and the new arrival cross paths. He is befriended and eventually chased the newcomer all the way home.

When he returned home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a "white alley," a kind of newbie. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his chores.

Tom comes home at suppertime. He tells his parents about his adventures. During supper, Aunt Polly is satisfied. She tells Tom he will be skipped school that afternoon and sent around the neighborhood and to the boy’s delight, Tom’s half-brother, Huck, is to visit. Tom is smart enough to disguise his hand and shrugs his shoulders about the beating.

Tom goes out of the house into the street. He is hot, tired, and whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom and the new arrival catch the eye of a man who finally stops them to chas the newcomers all the way home.
