The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s misdeeds andhow she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time, his pockets bulging. He boasts how he has been skipped school that afternoon and went to the woods, where he met Bill Nye and played hooky. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has swung the shuttlesall the way home.

Tom and the new arrival at the house are out in the yard with a chair and a hoe, while little Mark is whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, two boys, Sam, and Ben, spot a willing victim—Mark. Tom has sworn the shuttlesall the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirtied clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of mallet. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his toil.

Tom comes home at supper time. His face is dirty and he smells of ink-black and small, and Aunt Polly is satisfied. During supper, Aunt Polly tells Tom that he will not be skipped school that afternoon and must go to school for an hour and a half. Tom's half-brother, Sid, is in school, but not Tom. Tom is always in the streets. Aunt Polly is outraged and accuses Tom of all sorts of mischief and eventually charges the newcomers of the way house.
